IN THE SOCIAL WORLD

Secretary and Mrs. Root Give State Dinner.

OFFICIAL CIRCLES ARE BUSY

Senator and Mrs. Dryden Entertain for Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Shaw—Ambassador and Mrs. Durand Are Guests of Honor at the French Embassy—Society Gossip.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Root entertained the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at dinner last evening, when their new home on Rhode Island avenue was seen at its best.

The entire suite of four rooms, one opening into the other, is now carpeted in rich, plain red velvet, with the furniture either in dark red, or an artistic dull green, the interior being one of the most attractive in Washington.

In the dining-room the floral decoration was a beautiful arrangement of delicate pink begonias. The company, in addition to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, included the Ambassador to Great Britain and Mrs. Reid, Senator and Mrs. Lodge, President Arthur Hadley, of Yale, and Mrs. Hadley, President Nicholas M. Butler, of Columbia University, who is a guest at the White House; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Bacon, Mrs. Richard Townsend, Mrs. E. H. Slater, Miss Boardman, Mr. John Caldwell, and Mr. Charles McKim, both of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. White, Miss Root, and Mr. Edward W. Root.

The Austrian Embassy on Connecticut avenue was kept busy yesterday receiving the many congratulations on the news cable from Vienna of the conferring of the hereditary title of baron upon the Ambassador, Mr. Ladislaus Hengelmüller. The latter, who was recently called into consultation with the Emperor, is now en route from Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, and is expected to arrive in New York to-morrow. He will come at once to Washington. Baron Hengelmüller's friends are much surprised by the statement appearing in connection with the announcement of his new honor, to the effect that he would probably retire from diplomacy in the coming year, which was said at the embassy yesterday to be without foundation, as it is well known Baron Hengelmüller hopes to serve his Emperor for many years to come, with the same courage and fidelity which have already brought him much honor and recognition. The title he has just received being hereditary, will descend to his only child, a little girl of seven years.

Although second in the line of the ambassadors, Baron Hengelmüller is the senior envoy of the corps, having enjoyed a continuous service at Washington since 1882. He and the Baroness Hengelmüller have not only been the ruling spirits of the corps for many years, but also have enjoyed the close personal friendship of three Presidents and an enviable place in American society in Washington, New York, Newport, and Bar Harbor.

Senator and Mrs. Dryden entertained a dinner company last evening, at which the guests of honor were the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Shaw. To meet them were present Senator and Mrs. Gallinger, Senator and Mrs. Burrows, Senator and Mrs. Scott, Senator and Mrs. Bulkeley, Senator Piles, Representative and Mrs. Dulzell, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Rixey, Maj. and Mrs. Symons, Mrs. Henderson, and Col. and Mrs. Kouser.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand entertained at dinner last evening, when their guests were the Ambassador from Great Britain and Lady Durand, whose approaching departure is made the occasion of a daily dinner party by the Washington friends. Owing to the deep mourning of Mme. Jusserand, who is taking no active part in general society, the guests were limited to members of the embassy staff.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth opened their Thursday evening reception, which have long been notable events of each season, last evening by a musical. The artists of the evening were Miss Childs, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Francis MacMillan, violinist.

Miss Josephine Durand, who is very popular with a large circle of young people, was entertained at a small dance and domino party last evening by Miss Gaff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Gaff, who are giving a large dance on Saturday.

January 8. The company last evening was most informal and represented only the close friends of the guest of honor.

One of the largest as well as one of the most enjoyable teas of the season was given yesterday by Mrs. G. T. Mayne, of 1800 N street, which served as a housewarming for this residence, formerly a well-known social center, which was purchased last year by its present owners. The rooms were decorated in American Beauty roses and Christmas greens. A portion of the Marine Band orchestra played during the afternoon.

Mrs. Hancock, Mrs. Robert Hinckley, and Mrs. Reeves Russell did the honors of the dining-room, while other assistants of the afternoon included Mrs. John Larus, of Baltimore; Mrs. Pettus, the Misses Shaw, Miss Joanna Schroeder, Miss Williams, Miss Chase, Miss Jennings, Miss Le Breton, Miss Hatfield, Miss Humphrey, Miss Leutze, Miss Perle Anderson, Miss Barry, Miss Fleming, Miss Bradley, Miss Pauline Magruder, and Miss Doyle.

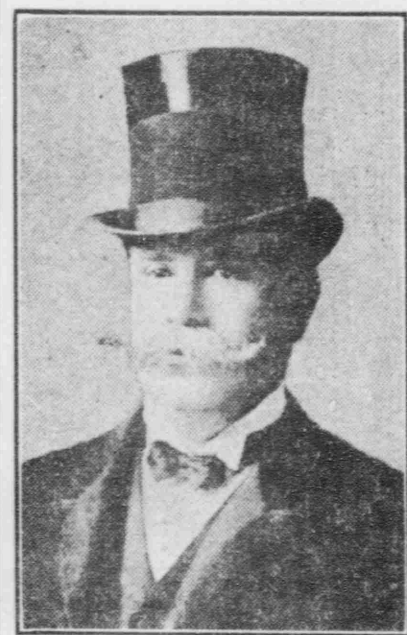

Mrs. Cassels and Miss Cassels entertained at a tea for young people yesterday afternoon, complimentary to Capt. and Mrs. Arthur Cassels, who are on a honeymoon visit to Washington. The handsome young bride was formerly Miss Marguerite Sloan, of Charleston, S. C., where her marriage took place several weeks ago.

In the tea-room Mrs. R. C. Bulmer, Mrs. Fleming Newbold, and Miss Edes did the honors. Capt. Cassels, who is the only son of the hostess, is now stationed at Fort Moultrie, S. C., where he and his bride will reside.

Mr. Henry Gardner, of Chicago, a former classmate of Mr. Richard Fairbanks at Yale, is the guest of the latter at his parents' home in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Warren Fairbanks and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Fairbanks will arrive in Washington to-morrow to pass Christmas with the Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks, who will have only a family party for Christmas Day. Mr. Robert Fairbanks, the youngest of the Vice President's four sons, arrived from Yale last evening.

Miss Helen Cannon, daughter of the Speaker, left yesterday for Danville, Ill., to spend Christmas at her home, but expects to return to this city in time to receive on New Year's Day. Speaker Cannon will also be with his daughters on Christmas Day, and will return with Miss Cannon.

The board of managers of the Garfield Hospital, of which Mrs. John K. Logan is the president, are holding a benefit sale and luncheon at the Masonic Temple, Ninth and F streets. Luncheon will be served by the ladies in charge to-day and to-morrow, from 12 to 2 o'clock.

Enrique Creel, Mexico's new Ambassador to the United States.

MONEY NEEDED FOR DINNER.

Salvation Army Feast Will Be Little Short Unless Aid Comes.

Despite the refusal of the Commissioners to permit the Salvation Army to use the method it has hitherto employed in raising funds for its annual Christmas dinner, that of installing pots in the streets throughout the city and trusting to the liberality of the passing public, William S. Quirk, adjutant of the Salvation Army, reports that at present the arrangements for the dinner are progressing well.

He says, however, that while contributions have been coming in, a considerable sum still remains to be raised if all poor are to be provided for.

The dinner will be given away on the afternoon and evening of December 24, in front of the army's headquarters, 530 Pennsylvania avenue, as has hitherto been the custom.

Best time to avoid the rush—9 to 11 A. M., 2 to 4 P. M., and 8 to 10 P. M.

Despite Law in Case Mother Is Not Deported.

WASHINGTON MUST DECIDE IT

Watchorn, the Commissioner of Immigration, Allows His Parental Instincts to Sweep Aside the Law and He Refuses to Part Family at Ellis Island—Thought of Golden Rule.

New York, Dec. 20.—Robert E. Watchorn is commissioner of immigration, but Mr. Watchorn is a father. That's why the commissioner for the first time in his life has refused to obey the law, and that is why a little Jewish mother is not yet torn away from the bosom of her family, as the law prescribes she shall be. Commissioner Watchorn, as an official decided that as the mother was suffering from a contagious disease of the eyes she would have to be deported. He has tried three times to carry out his duty to the government, but each time his feelings as a man and father have balked him.

He just can't do it, so he is going to let the "man higher up" in Washington pass final judgment upon the fate of the unfortunate woman.

Sent for His Wife.

Itzig Weissberg is a prosperous tailor in Albany. He came here five years ago with his eldest daughter, who has kept house for him ever since. Weissberg applied for citizenship papers, and recently decided to send for his wife, Goldie, who arrived last week on the steamer Rhein, bringing with her the other children—Bessie, fifteen years; Lieb, ten; Moroch, seven, and Joseph, five.

Weissberg was at Ellis Island to greet his family. His face was wreathed in smiles when he saw his younger children, and he chuckled gleefully when he tossed the "baby" in his arms high in the air. But he thought it strange that his wife was behind him and not permitted to greet him properly.

The doctors told the tailor that his wife was suffering from trachoma, and could not land. The four children might stay, they said, but the wife must go back to Europe.

"But she has nobody there," he cried. "She has no one to care for her."

But his appeal did not move them.

"Must Go Back," Says Official.

Mr. Watchorn, the official, heard the case in the board room. He saw the little woman with the hair streaked with gray, with the sad, appealing eyes and the mute, trembling lips. The official saw the little family at her side, and he saw the father and the eldest daughter in the other corner of the room.

"She must go back," said the official, and the interpreter mumbled it off to them in Russian, their native tongue. Then Joseph began to cry and the mother clasped the "baby" to her breast and their sobs made the official turn his eyes toward the south window where the steamboats lie.

Then the well of unofficial manhood broke its dam and the official didn't see the steamboats nor anything else but the little family back of him. The fatherly Watchorn's lip began to tremble. The mastery of the law was in peril. The official Watchorn lip grew as rigid as death.

The Official Speaks.

"Take them away," said the official Watchorn, "she'll have to go back," and as though squaring accounts with something within his heart, the official added: "I can't help it."

So it was arranged that the woman should be returned on the steamer York yesterday. The representative of the law in blue uniform and brass buttons took the little woman with the gray hair toward the steamboat that was going to transfer her to the York ready to start for Bremen.

As brass buttons told the little Russian mother that she might say "good-by" to her four younger children, the official Watchorn came in. The mother caught sight of him and before he realized what had happened she was on her knees in the great wide rotunda, kissing the ground and begging him, between sobs, not to part her from her children.

Thought of Golden Rule.

Watchorn thought of section something or other, which made it mandatory upon him to deport the woman. That was the official Watchorn. The unofficial Watchorn thought of a golden rule he once learned in Sunday school.

"Take her back to the hospital," he said. "I'll give you further orders in ten minutes."

Twice after that the start of the woman for the steamship was made, but each time the official Watchorn let sentiment get the better of duty, and to-day the little Russian mother still is separated from her family and waiting to be deported.

But if she is to be deported somebody in Washington will have to do it. For Watchorn the man was not let Watchorn the official obey orders.

MAKE A TRIP TO HOLY LAND.

Dwight Elmendorf Delivers Lecture at New National.

Through the Holy Land on horseback, was the trip made by the audience of Dwight Elmendorf, at the New National yesterday. It was an extra lecture, but was well attended.

Many of the places made famous in scripture and biblical scenes were vividly portrayed on the screen and by the conversational style of Mr. Elmendorf's talks.

As the lecturer took his audience through the sacred places, he described briefly much of the biblical history. The lecture opened with a storm on the Atlantic, showing the waves as they dash over the prow of an ocean liner. Another course will be given in February and March. This will be devoted chiefly to Great Britain and Ireland.

Connecticut Association Meets.

A meeting of the Connecticut Republican Association in Grand Army Hall gave the Washington residents from the Nutmeg State an opportunity to meet each other over a barrel of home-grown apples and Connecticut-wrapped cigars. A number of speakers vied with each other in extolling their native soil and its products, human, vegetable, and miscellaneous. "The necessity of a strong political organization" was touched on in every speech, and congratulations on the recent Republican victory were extended to everybody.

College Teaches Journalism.

Columbia, Mo., Dec. 20.—The board of curators of the University of Missouri Tuesday night decided by unanimous vote to establish a college of journalism. Heretofore journalism has been taught in the university only by occasional lectures.

CARDINAL DOES NOT OBJECT.

Catholics Will Show Resentment of France's Actions.

Preparations for the mass-meeting to voice the dissatisfaction of Washington Catholics with the action of the French government toward their fellow-religionists in that country are being made with great activity by those interested in the movement.

A meeting will be held next Sunday afternoon in Carroll Institute to make the final arrangements. The date selected for the demonstration is Sunday, December 30. Although this falls during the holiday season, when many prominent Catholics are out of the city, Mr. Donovan, president of the Aloysius Club, and one of the foremost men in the project, is confident that a large audience will listen to the speakers. Those who will make the addresses have not yet been announced, but it is said that representatives of every creed will join in disapproval of the acts of the French government.

At the Carroll Institute last night P. J. Hattigan made an address, in which he dwelt strongly on the necessity of a closer allegiance of Catholic organizations to one another, and deplored the fact that a more spontaneous outburst did not greet the proposed movement.

The object of the demonstration, as explained by Mr. Hattigan, is to start a series of meetings all over the country in order that the French government may learn the view the Catholics of the United States take of their recent proposals. Cardinal Gibbons has been consulted as to the propriety of such demonstrations, and has made no objection.

The boycott which the Knights of Columbus have declared on French goods has not yet been taken up by the local organization, nor have any copies of the resolution been received by the local councils. It is probable that no such action will be followed in this city, although the Washington knights will undoubtedly join in the mass-meeting project with earnestness.

MISS STROTHER IS WEDDED.

Washington (Va.) Belle Is Bride of Joseph Hoge.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Washington, Va., Dec. 20.—Trinity Episcopal Church was the scene of a beautiful wedding Wednesday at noon when Miss Eliza Harvey Strother, of "The Meadows," an attractive and popular young lady, became the bride of Joseph Hoover Hoge, a cousin of ex-Gov. J. Hoge Tyler, and a young business man of Bluefield, W. Va.

Miss Belle Strother, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Pedro Alexander, of Roanoke, acted as best man. The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Hoge, of Pembroke; Miss Mary Browning, of Flint Hill; Miss Lucy Strother, of Pearisburg; and Miss Hill Carter, of this place. The ushers were Botts Strother, of Welch, W. Va.; Albert Hoge, of Roanoke and Richmond; Clay Mason, of Giles County, and Jake Keyser, of Washington.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. William Norwood Tilden, rector of Trinity Church. The bride was given away by her father, Judge James F. Strother, a prominent lawyer.

After the ceremony, the bridal party and a few relatives and intimate friends were entertained at breakfast at the bride's home. Mr. and Mrs. Hoge left North. Upon their return the first of the year they will be at home at Bluefield.
